“ Larry, Larry, Larry where do I begin?! To honor your memory properly I must be myself and write something appropriate; meaning sincere, yet honest. I know any attempt to match your sly wit will be futile, so I won't try :) I can, however, absolutely say you were a sweet, giving, full of life, S. O. B. that knew exactly how to challenge me while simultaneously making me laugh like hardly anyone I've ever known - which in hindsight - is a gift. I thank you for dragging me out of the house on many mornings to join you and my Mom for breakfast at Rick's, our trip to Florida to set up your condo (and the hour or two of leisure you graciously allowed us in between all the work - haha), and our many dinners at various local eateries (as long as we had a coupon, right? - but I know you're laughing at this!!!), your ability to tell funny stories from your past that made me feel like I was there, your thoughtful fatherly advice, your colorful honesty, your way with words, and of course - and perhaps above all else - your infectious smile.

I like to think I'll see that smile again one day and you know the first thing I'll do is ask you to tell me the story of "Feathers" just one more time (for the hundredth time!) Not having a large family myself, I definitely considered you a family member for many years. You will be remembered often and missed dearly.

“ Larry and I have been friends since the 1990s. We have traveled on cruises and to his condo in Florida. And we have had many good times going to dinner at many of his favorite restaurants. - and to the country club for dinner . . sometimes in his golf cart! Recently I have been visiting him once every week for the last two and a half years bringing him lunch and helping with things he needed I miss him, his advice, his bright smile and his wicked sense of humor! He lived life to the fullest and brightened up every room he was in . . . heaven is now definitely a brighter and happier place.

“ Larry and his dad made a series of commercials advertising Collingwood Water. This is a still of one that was modeled after the Bartles and Jaymes wine cooler commercials that were popular at the time.

“ My best memories of Larry were when we were kids. He was the oldest cousin and we had some fun times at family Christmas parties. After we were teenagers I lost contact but I always remember his smile. God give you peace as you grieve his loss. Celebrate your memories and I know he is so happy to be reunited with his darling Pat.
