“ Adam, thank you for always being so supportive of my passions. I'm so sad we didn't get to connect recently. I will miss our talks so much. You were a light pillar of this community.

“ Adam was a second dad to me the memories we shared will touch me forever. I remember being so excited when he went out of his way to make sure I got the best art supplies for Christmas. I used those markers into the ground. He always encouraged me to pursue my passions and told me I was one of the best artists he knew. I've since stopped drawing, but I'm now picking it back up. Because if he believed in little Sophmore me that much it really means something. He set me up with my first apartment that time living under him and getting to spend time together walking Finn made me so happy. Cooking on the grill together and talking about anything that came to mind made me so happy. Listening to our jams on the monster speaker while we fixed up the condo are still among my fondest memories of my childhood. I can't comprehend that I'm only 20 and he's gone. I wanted to show him that I was going to live up to the support he gave me, really make something of myself. I thought one day I'd have Adam take my wedding photos. I can't comprehend the fact we spoke Monday and now he's gone. I can never fully put into words the impact that Adam made on my life. I wish I got to thank him to his face for all he did for me. I'm just happy that I got to spend my growing years with someone so genuinely kind and supportive. Thanks again Adam, I'm really going to miss you.
