“ Here is the photo I took of the stained glass fish you made the last time we made art together at the Botanical Gardens. I had an extra sport reserved and I asked you if you'd come with me and you said "yes!" Without hesitation. You helped me make my humming bird because I forgot how to do all the fluxing! :) Thank you. I hope your family still has your fish. I'm glad I was able to find the photo for them. I still think of you and miss you... I know you're on my side up there. I will look forward to seeing you again... God willing. Love and Condolences... Correy Adams

“ Erin, you were my friend. A rock in my life when I needed one. I will miss you.. but cherish the memories I have... Ebrytime I look at the stained glass hummingbird I made that day we took the class at Botanical Gardens not even a year ago.. You made a fish.. I took your picture. I just remember it was the happiest I had seen you in a while. You talked about how much you loved stained glass and wanted to do it more... We were both art teachers but you helped me with mine. You taught me things that day! Things I had forgotten... I'm so glad I got to know you. You were an amazing friend... a beautiful soul... Please keep watching over me...! Until we meet again.... Your friend, Correy Adams. Love you!

“ I'm an aid at St. Rose and worked with Erin everyday. We worked carline in the mornings. I will miss our morning talks. I will miss how she would wrap herself in a blanket for those bitter, cold carline mornings. I will miss the floral umbrella, on rainy days, that her mother got her. I will miss her holding her coffee as she dismissed cars. I will miss her laughter and her smile.

Rest In Peace

“ I was a teacher at Saint Rose and worked along with Erin until last year. She was a great person to work with, always willing to help out and share a story about her classes. I admired her as a hard working Mom and teacher, and always appreciated her easy-going personality. She loved talking about her students' projects and creativity. She and her family will be remembered in my prayers.

“ Erin played adult soccer with me for many years until her schedule got to busy with her son playing soccer. She was a warm funny person. We all loved her on the team, her fierceness on and off the field was inspiring. She will be missed. Praying for her son and family. RIP my friend. Tammi Mills
