“ Silly little story...Monday, my daughter, Cailey, informed me she got rid of our faded, one-legged, brown paper bag turkey that she made for me many years ago. I was a little upset as this guy had been on our Thanksgiving table for the last dozen years or so. Wednesday night, the little guy appeared back in the house. I assumed that Cailey went and salvaged it, but was informed that he was found on Kathy's desk at work!! This made me smile. I don't know how she got him, or what plans she had for him.....but Thank You Kathy for saving this turkey! I will surely think of you and share this story around the Thanksgiving table every year!

“ Kathy - It will never be the same without you hear at the office to keep us all in line. Your constant "smile" and "good mood" made you very special to all of us. Keep watching over us hear at the office as you know we need your help....every day! I think we are going to have to order a new copy machine since there is nobody hear that knows how to keep it running now.

Thanks for the memories...tell Doc I said hello when you two get together to assemble a few Insta-Plaks.

“ Wow Kathy! I miss you already. You didn't mention last week that you were going to leave. I had a few words with "the Man upstairs" and he says you are just fine and have the best room in the house - with a large window (no shrubs to block your view) - and lots and lots of slot machines. But, best of all, your sister is right next door! You go girl!

Great memories of our friend and work associate, her contributions the last 14 years are invaluable. I'm already missing my office buddy, her quick comments "your late"...with a smile....(most of the time) or... "lottery" ...as she continued walking...(see...you had to catch her if you wanted in.....she wasn't slowing down to wait). Well Kathy, your lottery has finally come. We'll always cherish our memories with you down here and expecting you will hold me a spot up there....if you already put up with me 14 years, what's an eternity :)

Bill, you know where we are and we expect your regular visits! Our support and assistance is always available.

Thinking of you, Jim Byrd
