“ Sally was a very nice lady. She would always tease me at work that I was the queen of minute books because I always had so many at my desk. Every time she saw something that said queen on it, she would bring it in for me. Over the years, I accumulated quite a collection of queen items. Sally was liked very much at work and was such a good worker. I know we all missed her when she left.##imported-begin##Barbara McDonald bmcDonald@slk-law.com##imported-end##

“ I read this at my Fathers funeral service. It still helps me today with many things along my way.
Letting Go
Like children whom bring thier broken toys, with tears, for us to mend. I brought my broken heart and dreams to God, Because he was my friend. But instead of leaving my God, in peace to do His work alone, I hung around and tried to help. With ways that where my own. At last, in a furry, I snatched them back and cried, " My God, How can you be so slow!?" " My child, God said " what could I do, You never did let go."
